CIA HEAD SAYS
RUSSIANS MADE
2 'FATAL ERRORS'

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 28

(UP)—Allen W. Dulles, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, said yesterday that Soviet leaders have made two "fatal errors" that will make it difficult for them to continue a "hard dictatorship."

The first, he said, was accepting the "respectability of the Tito experiment in Yugoslavia." This, he said, encouraged similar movements toward independence among the satellites. The second error, Dulles said, was the attempt to give the Soviet people mass education and still close them off from the outside world.

As a result, Dulles said in an address at Yale University, "it is not too much to predict that the Soviet Union can never be the same as it was in the days of Stalin."
